

New superintendent wants to do what he teaches

DR. CARL E. WILSEY, a Colorado professor of education who said he wants to do the things he teaches, was named superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District Wednesday.

Wilsey, 49, will replace retiring Superintendent Dr. Harris Taylor on July 1. He was given a three-year, $38,000-a-year contract by the school district trustees, who selected him from an initial field of 195 candidates. He is a professor at the University of Northern Colorado in Greeley, Colo.

Besides nine years teaching at two universities and nearly 17 years as a teacher and administrator for six California school districts, Wilsey has served as an educational consultant and has written extensively in the field.

In a telephone interview, Wilsey said his major focus has been "accountability, involving the community faculty and students and in making districts more effective in using the money they have."

He said he wants to leave the university because "I am looking for new challenges professionally. I want a chance to practice the things I have been writing and teaching about."

A California native, Wilsey said he and his wife have many friends and relatives in the state. The quality of the Carmel district also led him to accept the job, he added.

NEW CARMEL School Superintendent Dr. Carl E. Wilsey will receive $38,000 a year in his new job. Wilsey, 49, presently is a professor of education at the University of Northern Colorado in Greeley, Colo.

"This is an outstanding school district, with a good school board and a good staff," Wilsey said.

HE VISITED the area during the final round of interviews in mid-March, when district trustees and a community committee interviewed the six finalists.

Wilsey will be back in Carmel early in May for a party to introduce him to the public, according to Pamela D. Smith, president of the board of trustees.

He formally will start work on July 1, when his contract and the new fiscal year begin.

Wilsey was born in Stockton. He attended Lodi High School and Pasadena Junior College before becoming an elementary school teacher in the Stockton district.

He received his bachelor's degree in psychology from the University of the Pacific in Stockton in 1956 and a master's degree there in 1959. Wilsey earned his doctorate in educational administration from Stanford University in 1960 and has completed additional graduate work at Harvard University.

Beginning his career as a teacher in Stockton, Wilsey served as superintendent and principal of the Alpine-Victor School District in Victor; assistant business manager of Salinas Public Schools; assistant superintendent for Woodland Public Schools; deputy superintendent of the Stockton Unified School District from 1962 until 1967; and as superintendent of the Santa Cruz City School District from 1969 until 1971.

Wilsey had a brief tenure on the faculty of the University of Illinois from 1967 until 1969, before joining the University of Northern Colorado faculty in September 1971. He has tenure at the university.

Wilsey has been a consultant in educational planning and management for school districts, state departments of education and management firms nationwide. He has written extensively about school administration for a variety of professional journals.

During the Korean War, he served two years with the U.S. Army Medical Corps.

WILSEY AND his wife, Marilyn, have two children. His son David is a senior at Colorado State University who "may go into banking," according to his father. Daughter Diane is a sophomore there, but may transfer to a California school when her parents move.

Wilsey is a member of the Lions Club and the Greely Chamber of Commerce. He and his wife belong to the Methodist Church there.

Reject incorporating

Village merchants may form council

A BUSINESSMEN's group in Carmel Valley Village has begun discussions about forming a village council or other community board which could help direct the course of development in the area.

The committee, organized by Peter Coakley, owner of the Village Lodge, met for the second time last week. It is trying to find a way to cope with "city-type problems in our little village," according to Coakley.

"I'm nervous because it could continue to be developed without any plan, any theme, any course to follow," he said in an interview. "We're a county town under the direction of the board of supervisors, but they don't have the time, staff or interest to devote to the village."

Coakley said he doesn't believe there is any sentiment in favor of incorporating the village as a city. The committee has rejected the other formal alternative for self-government, a municipal advisory council (MAC).

According to Dr. Edward Marcucci, a village dentist and chairman of the committee, the group felt a MAC would simply be another layer of government. Its members also had doubts about the willingness of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to share its power with a MAC.

The subject of MACs had been set on the board agenda for Tuesday by Supervisor Michal Moore, but was withdrawn because of opposition by residents of his Fourth District.

Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel was the first county official to look into this unique form of local government for unincorporated areas. Farr said last week that he favors giving information about MACs to community groups and then "let the people decide in the planning process" if they want to organize in that fashion.

MACs ARE authorized under state law and can be approved by the board of supervisors for use in any county. They consist of elective or appointive bodies with city council-like powers, serving unincorporated communities.

The supervisors retain final authority in decision-making, according to a memorandum Moore sent to his fellow supervisors, but in other counties MAC units have potent advisory powers in matters affecting their communities.

Financing for MAC functions either comes from a county general fund allocation or, in some rare cases, through a local tax assessment.

Coakley said when he broached the idea of a MAC to the village committee, "there was quite a mixed reaction." Further study led to rejection of the idea.

Marcucci said Monday that the study group believes a Carmel Valley Village committee is needed. He said its goals should include village beautification, setting architectural and landscape standards to develop a village theme and representing

'City-type' issues are cropping up village business interests in dealings with county government.

The committee plans to call a general public meeting to get more ideas, probably sometime in May.

MARCUCCI SAID the committee would act, in effect, as a lobbying group for the village at the county level.

As a former county planning commissioner, he said his experience has been that "if you have people there, with some reputation, it carries weight. We need a medium to bring the people's desires to the county boards."

"We're a little community of 5,000 with some of the problems of a small city," Coakley commented. "Without direction, we could wind up without character, as just another town."

About 30 business people turned out for the first study group meeting seven weeks ago, Marcucci said. The committee is composed of himself, Coakley, Lou Gardner, Lou Allaire, John Tobias, John Church, Randy Randazzo, Jannelle Kaminske, Ne Thomas and Joe Chaplin.

Series of anti-rabies clinics to begin on Tuesday

A series of anti-rabies clinics are scheduled next week in the Carmel and Carmel Valley areas and the vaccines will be administered at a reduced rate.

The first clinic is scheduled Tuesday in Carmel at Sunset Center from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. In Carmel Valley, the clinic is planned next Thursday from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. at the Carmel Valley fire station on Via Contenta.

Each clinic is being conducted under the auspices of the Monterey County Health Department and the Tri-County Veterinary Medical Association. Vaccines will cost $2 and are good for two years. No personal checks

sold at some of the clinics. Licenses cost $10 or $5 if the pet is spayed or neutered. Dog licenses expire on May 31.

A total of 25 clinics are scheduled in April and May in the county and the goal is to vaccinate 7,000 dogs, said Dr. Robert J. Bowersox, director of the Monterey County Health Department.

Clinics also are scheduled in Big Sur and Pebble Beach. The Pebble Beach clinic is planned for Monday, April 24, at the Lighthouse Gate. It will be open from 1 to 2:30 p.m.

At Big Sur, the clinic is scheduled on Wednesday, May 10, at the Grange Hall. The time is from 12:30 to 2 p.m.

BOB WILSON of Carmel Valley still a volunteer worker in the Salinas Valley Fair.

Salinas Valley Fair worker

Bob Wilson still an enthusiast

Bob Wilson of Carmel Valley lives some distance from King City, but that doesn't stop him from volunteering his services to the Salinas Valley Fair year after year.

A rancher in the Valley, Wilson has ties to the Salinas Valley. He owns a ranch near San Lucas and he traces his roots back to the Tresconys, an old south county family which received Rancho San Lucas in a Mexican land grant in the 1840s.

He and his wife, Betty, are both active in the fair. Wilson has been helping with the weighing-in of livestock for four or five years now and helps ship the cattle out after the fair, when few other volunteers remain.

The Wilsons, with their children, arrive early and spend Fair Week in King City because of the distance involved in traveling back and forth to Carmel Valley.

He keeps coming back to help out at the fair "cause Gus Settrini (fair director) tells me to," Wilson joked. Actually, it's the youngsters who keep Wilson coming back—his and others from the Carmel Valley area. His own children were in 4-H and showed animals at the fair. Four of the Wilsons' children are now attending Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo.

Betty has been working with youngsters in 4-H for many years, coaching kids for contests. The couple's oldest daughter has been clerking at the fair for about two years now.

Valley youths hurt in auto accident

Two Carmel Valley youths were injured last week when their car went out of control in Del Monte Forest and crashed into two roadside trees.

Jeff Dale Glasco, 16, the driver, and his brother, Douglas Brian Glasco, 14, both of 140 W. Carmel Valley Rd., were treated at Community Hospital for injuries following the accident on April 5. It occurred at 7:50 a.m.

Jeff was treated and released in the emergency room while Douglas was admitted for surgery at the hospital. He has since been released.

According to the California Highway Patrol, the youths were driving westbound on Riata Road just east of Forest Lake Road at about 55 miles per hour when Jeff Glasco lost control of the car on a curve. The compact car struck a pine and an oak tree beside the road.

The vehicle suffered major damage.

Birth in Portland makes Valley grandparents

It was easy to identify Master Scott James Conlan in a Portland hospital nursery filled with newborns, because the infant son of Debbie and Jim Conlan was the only baby wearing a baseball cap. The gift was purchased by his Valley grandfather, Bill Conlan, when the seven pound, nine ounce boy arrived March 27. It was an appropriate gift considering the hours logged by father, grandfather and uncles—both playing and coaching for many years in numerous sports programs.

Adding their welcome to the future Little Leaguer were maternal grandparents, Ruth and Mack Stauffer, former Valley residents who now make their home in Plano, Tex.; paternal grandmother, Mrs. Benita Updike of Carmel Valley; and paternal great grandmother, Mrs. Marie Tinnea of Seaside.

Scott and his parents reside in Portland, where Jim is parts manager for the Pacific Pump Co.

Troop 2012 inducts new junior Scouts

An impressive candle lighting ceremony was followed by a refreshment hour for parents and other guests at the Investiture of Junior Girl Scout Troop 2012 hosted recently at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center.

Among the girls participating were Shelley Koontz, Kara Deffley, Kristen

Deffley, Mara Negrini, Lundy Ellsberry, Ingrid McDonald, Michelle Tette, Danielle Pastrillani and Lisa Tweddell.

The Junior Troop, led by Mary Kay King and Ann Deffley, also organized a Brownie Play Day for Brownie Troop 2028 whose leader is Myrna French and Troop 2044, whose leader is Candy McWhorter.

The two-hour activity at the Tularcitos Playground fulfilled requirements toward the Scouting World Game Badge. The Scouts planned and carried out games and songs from around the world followed by a brown bag luncheon. Working on this project were Debbie Horn, Kristen Deffley, Robyn Sims (a recent transfer from Pacific Grove), Trina Clayton, Michelle Tette, Shelley Koontz and Lisa Twiddell.

Little League season starts

The 1978 Carmel Valley Little League season officially opens on Saturday with ceremonies beginning as close to 12:30 p.m. as completion of morning minor league play will permit. King Harris of KMST-TV has promised to be on hand for the festivities and the public is invited to come out to meet the coaches, manager and boys and girls who make up one of the Valley's major youth activities.

Registration cards have been filled out by 188 youngsters aged 8 to 12 this season with a record number of 60 8-year-olds.

League President Jim Shakal expressed the appreciation of the board of directors to the volunteers who responded to the Clean-up Day S.O.S. last weekend. The crew included two moms who wielded hoes and rakes while their spouses played golf.

Games at the Little League ball park off Paso Hondo beside the river are played every day except Sunday.

YWCA dinner

Panetta was guest

Valleyite Shirley Forsyth, executive director for the Young Women's Christian Association of the Monterey Peninsula, assisted by YWCA president Mildred Lawson, was in charge of the annual dinner meeting hosted recently at the Naval Postgraduate School.

Speaking before the 85 members and guests in attendance was Representative

Leon Panetta of Carmel Valley who discussed proposed or passed legislation dealing with women's issues; and Dr. Iona Logie, who gave a humorous dissertation on the organization's financial state of affairs.

New Valley members of the board of directors, elected during the evening, included Eloise Ewing, Teri Stott and Marian Robotti, who join fellow Valley board members Beth Julian, Ida Robinson and Elsa Wickham. Other new directors are Jean Soliz, Patricia Seldner, Yve Poyner, Jondell Wright, Kay Van Buren and Jan Crocker.

Padre sale

on Saturday

Additional chairmen have been added to the Padre Parent-sponsored Bargain Fair scheduled from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday in the Carmel High School gym.

Janet Childs has taken over the Silent Auction and has a selection of bid items from belt buckles to dinners at Peninsula establishments. Dorothy Lucido will conduct the auction during the rummage sale. Barbara Narvaez volunteered to chair the shoe department and reports a good selection of footwear for all family members.

Proceeds from the annual benefit are distributed as student scholarships.

Tularcitos to host open house

The students of Tularcitos School invite parents and friends from the community to their annual Open House on Wednesday. Classrooms will be open from 7 to 8 p.m. followed by dessert in the multipurpose room.

The Tularcitos Parent Club has scheduled a Bake, Book, Plant and Record Sale for the same evening from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Please attend and help to make the organization's last fund-raiser of the year a successful one.

I don't care how interesting they are—there will be no more talk about WORMS at

by lucy smithson

Every spring about this time life offers you some sure bets. Bet on these: Fish gonna swim, birds gonna fly and baby chicks will be hatched at the hatchery.

Those were the upbeat bets. Now for some sure-enough downbeat events: The sycamores and cottonwoods that have not yet budded out are dead. Taxes are due. Any horse that hasn't shed out his winter coat is probably wormy.

Death, taxes and worms are sure things. Of those three, fortunately, worms are cheap to deal with.

Horses get only two kinds of internal parasites. They get the larva of bot flies that suck blood from various sites along the digestive tract but mainly in the stomach. And they get roundworms, mainly large and small strongyles. There are some other varieties of roundworms that live inside horses but not in debilitating numbers.

Horse owners need to treat their horses with medicine to kill two sorts of parasites. Any medicine that kills roundworms will kill all varieties of roundworms. Any medicine that kills bot larva will also kill roundworms.

This is one of those propositions like "all squares are rectangles but not all rectangles are squares." All commercial bot medicines kill roundworms. Not all roundworm medicines kill bots.

To get chemical about it, there's only three kinds of worm medicines. There's piperazine, thiabendazole and a chlorinated phenyl compound sold as "Trichlorfon" or "DiChlorvos."

Piperazine is only about half good but it is very gentle and is the wormer of choice for continuous low-level worming, for pregnant mares and foals. Piperazine does not get bots. Horses eat piperazine mixtures readily, scarfing the treated grain right down.

Thiabendazole (or mebendazole) is about 90 per cent effective on roundworms. But some roundworms are becoming resistant to this wormer. For this reason, it is not recommended for exclusive use. Either trade off every other worming with one of the other wormers or combine one of the others with it. Thiabendazole does not get bots and horses eat it reluctantly.

Trichlorfon, sold as Bot-X, or DiChlorvos, sold as Shell Horse Wormer, gets bots. It also gets 99 and 44/100 of the roundworms in the horse's alimentary canal. It also gets the horse if you are not careful, careful, careful about following the directions on the label EXACTLY. Most horses won't touch it with a ten-foot pole after eating it once. Not frozen. Not with Vicks' VapoRub on their noses. Not after three days starvation. Not nohow.

Piperazine is an old wormer. Thiabendazole has been on the market 15 years. Trichlorfon has been available about a decade. Any advertisements you see for

NEW, IMPROVED worm medicines are the same old things in a mixture or a different way of delivering the medicine to the worms.

Delivery systems are mainly what you pay your money for. Piperazine in the feed once a month will cost you a couple of dollars. Thiabendazole mixed with paste in a premeasured syringe costs $5.95. Trichlorfon down the tube will cost you the veterinarian's time, trouble and transportation.

Once a month worming is not too often. Cheapskates like me do it every eight weeks. Feed costs too much to be feeding it to worms.

Worm eggs are airborne by the millions. There is no way of escaping worm infestation in horses.

It takes a roundworm about six weeks to grow from ingested egg through babyhood, young adulthood, marriage and eggs of its own. Therefore, six weeks and one day after a horse is totally worm-free, he can be totally infested and infecting the neighborhood again.

The sad fact, however, is that the horse is never totally worm-free. No matter which of the three worm medicines you use, no matter how it is delivered into the horse's gut, it only kills the worms it meets. It only meets the worms that happen to be in the alimentary canal between mouth and anus.

This is sure death or a badly upset stomach for any roundworm unlucky enough to be living in the gut on worming day. But horse worms are not stay-at-homes. They travel. They go out every weekend. "Hey, Imogene, let's get a group together and go visit the right hock—I bet we can make this dumb horse lame."

A horse going lame because strongyles are holding a dance party and love-in in his hind leg is a fairly common thing. Also, worms make him skinny, cause him to rub tail and mane on the corral fence until he looks like rat bristles, make the winter coat cling into spring and when the summer coat is finally revealed, it is dull and scurfy.

But what worms really do and why we kill them, is they give horses colic. This whole business of colic has only recently been understood.

Old-timers thought horses got colic (a stomachache) due to a change in feed, or from drinking water when hot or some other improbable cause. Now we understand that worms cause colic. They damage the horse's gut, making pockets and thin places in the gut walls. Sometimes there are so many worms inside the horse they completely block the gut, particularly in young horses.

Colic can kill a horse. Worms cause colic. They cause about 95 per cent of all the colic horses get. That's why horse owners need a regular worming program to keep their horses alive and healthy.

Decision near on sewers for Rancho Rio Vista

A public hearing will be convened next month on formation of a Rancho Rio Vista assessment district to bring Carmel Sanitary District sewer service to the 22 homeowners in the Carmel Valley subdivision.

The subdivision is located on the north slope of Carmel Valley, just across Carmel Valley Road from Middle School. Dwellers there presently use septic tanks.

District directors set the 8 p.m. hearing for Tuesday, May 16 when they met earlier this week in Carmel. When the move to form the assessment district began three years ago, all 22 homeowners at Rancho Rio Vista approved of the switch to sewer service.

Other homes in the area were left out of the district when the residents there said they would oppose the move. If all the landowners support the district, no tax election is necessary.

Neill Engineers, which has designed the sewer system for the tract, has estimated it will cost $138,000 to link the homes to the nearest district sewer main. Only the Rancho Rio Vista homeowners will pick up the tab. Bids on the project will be opened at 2 p.m. May 16 and considered by the district directors that night.

According to Bud Bigelow, business manager for the district, the cost of the project per home would be about $5,000 to $6,000 over the 30-year financing period. Hookup fees to the district are now $250 per home, with landowners responsible for putting in a lateral line from the sewer main to their home.

District directors are studying the connection fee structure and expect to revise it when the Area-wide Facilities Plan is complete sometime this summer. The fees would reflect the cost of maintaining the existing system and adding new facilities to cope with growth.

Kevin Walsh, the district engineer, told directors Tuesday that he is trying to complete the plan by July 1, the deadline imposed by the state. In the report, the district also is expected to select a final alternative for reducing the volume of effluent it pumps into Carmel Bay. It has narrowed down a list of 20 alternatives to five final choices, three involving some recycling of the treated wastewater, one of pumping the water to Monterey for disposal there and a final alternative of extending the existing pipeline farther out in the bay.

The bay has been declared an Area of Special Biological Significance by the state and the district has been told to reduce its wastewater discharge into the ocean.

Walsh told the directors that an April 6 workshop set with state officials on the alternatives was cancelled by the state because "they finally decided to take a look at information we submitted in December and over the last two years" on the effect the wastewater has on marine life in the bay. The workshop may be rescheduled next month.

Five living 'happy lives' feted by meditation group

Carmel has a policeman who upholds "natural law and order" and a congressman who may lead us into "the age of enlightenment."

At least, that is what the International Meditation Society decreed at an awards ceremony in Monterey on March 22.

The society honored five local citizens, basically for leading "happy and fulfilling lives," according to Steve Hasenberg, director of the Monterey center. The recipients also have shown "outstanding dedication in service to their community," he said.

Award recipients were:
• Officer Donald Fuselier of the Carmel Police Department for Natural Law and Order: "preserving values of justice in the community."

• Jack Giles, director of the Carmel Youth Center, for Cultural Integrity and World Harmony: "establishing a harmonious relationship between different levels of society."

• Haymo Taeuber, conductor and music director of the Monterey County Symphony, for Celebrations and Fulfillment: "an artist whose works inspire the spirit of progress."

• Representative Leon Panetta (D-Monterey) for Capitals of the Age of Enlightenment: "whose contributions have enhanced the well-being of the community and raised the dignity of life."

• Lloyd Baskerville, Carmel High School teacher, for Education and Enlightenment: "whose teaching reflects the highest values of knowledge."

None of the award recipients are members of the International Meditation Society, according to Hasenberg.

Most of the award recipients attended the ceremony, except Giles of the Youth Center and Panetta. Sylvia Panetta accepted the award for her husband.

Mrs. Panetta said she did not know if her husband would begin practicing transcendental meditation (TM). "It's always a possibility," she said.

Giles is mystified over the honors. "You got me," he replied when asked why he was named to receive the award.

Officer Fuselier said his award is probably related to his work with the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project. The organization seeks employment for youths with police records.

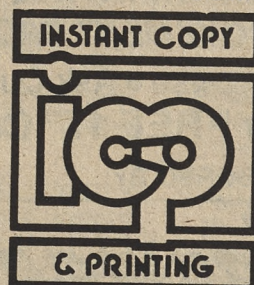

Fuselier said he has not yet found a place in his home to hang the certificate of honor. "I'm honored and overwhelmed, but you'd think they could find a cop somewhere who practices TM. I don't," he said.

Padres take easy wins in first two league games

By JAY POSNER

THE CARMEL High Padres opened their Mission Trail Athletic League baseball season on a high note by defeating Hollister, 5-2, and routing Palma, 6-2, last week. The Padres hosted Pacific Grove on Tuesday, King City arrives today and on Friday, Carmel travels to Gonzales. All games will start at 3:30 p.m.

Last Friday at Palma, Carmel scored all six of their runs in the fifth inning and went on to win 6-2. Pitcher Steve Sepersky, now 4-0, fired a three-hitter. Palma had scored two unearned runs in the second inning to take a 2-0 lead, but the Padres rallied in the fifth off losing pitcher Tim Vanoli. Tom Frincke singled to open the inning and he went to second as Neil Vandervort grounded out.

Tim Sherman sent Frincke to third with a single and Frincke scored as Mark Bordonaro put down a perfect squeeze bunt. John Lucido gave Carmel the lead with a triple to right-centerfield. Dave McKenzie followed with a single to score Lucido and McKenzie later scored on a double steal with Dave Carpenter, who reached base on a walk. Sepersky drove in Carpenter with a single for the final run of the inning.

In the junior varsity game, the Padres routed Palma 10-1 for their second McKenzie doubled home two with the bases loaded and Roling followed with a single to score the third run of the inning. Carmel's last run came in the seventh as Tom Frincke singled in Tim Sherman.

In the junior varsity game, Carmel defeated Hollister, 6-4, as Mike Wecker picked up the win with relief help from David Spear. Wecker added a home run for two of Carmel's runs.

straight win. Pitcher Dwight Spicher, now 1-1, went the distance for the win.

ON WEDNESDAY of last week at Hollister, the Padres built a 5-0 lead behind pitcher John Lucido, but Lucido gave up two runs in the seventh and gave way to reliever Pat Kelly. Kelly came in with one out and the bases loaded and he quickly ended the game. He got Hollister cleanup hitter Mike Hagins on a strikeout and induced All-MTAL third baseman Al Martinez to pop up to left field. The save was Kelly's first of the year.

The Padres had taken a 1-0 lead in the first inning as Dave Carpenter doubled in Pete Roling, who had been safe on an error. Carmel added three more in the second when Dave

Don Wester - Ex-car dealer is 'born again'

By KEN PETERSON

IN 1975, Don Wester seemed to have everything. A wife and three children. A nice home in Carmel Valley. A successful automobile dealership. A past career as a championship race car driver.

What he did not have was contentment and a sense of purpose in his life. That is why he recently sold his share of the business and today works for free as the business administrator in Monterey for Young Life, an international Christian youth organization.

The catalyst for this dramatic change of direction was a three-day weekend in February 1975, out of which Wester emerged as a "born again" Christian, his faith restored and given a personal meaning it had never had before.

"I was at a point in life where I had achieved all my goals," Wester said. "I had plenty of money to spend, I thought I had a good family thing going. I just got to the point where I couldn't make it happen any more."

The weekend that changed his life was a "short course on Jesus Christ," personal testimonies shared by others who had had their faith infused with new meaning, Wester says.

He now calls that weekend "the greatest time in my life" because he came out a new person.

"I had always been self-centered," said Wester, 46. "With Christ, I'm changing my life constantly. I'm more outgoing, a more loving, concerned person for others."

There are changes in his home life, too. He describes his children as "more fired up than I've ever seen them in my life. They're new people."

The personal self-discipline Wester used in his business extended into his home life, he says. At home, he said, "I would lay down the rules, how it was going to be. Then I'd get upset if it didn't come out that way."

WESTER AND HIS brother, Jim, who still owns Wester Porsche-Audi-Volkswagen, started the dealership in 1960. Jim was the salesman and Don was the organizer. It has grown and become one of the most successful dealerships on the Peninsula.

Don had another outlet for his energies besides business—he raced cars. Beginning in 1957 at the age of 25, Wester drove primarily for Porsche for 11 years. He won a national championship in the "under 2-liter" class in 1966 driving a Porsche Carrera. Driving took him around the country, to Daytona Beach, Sebring and Watkins Glen.

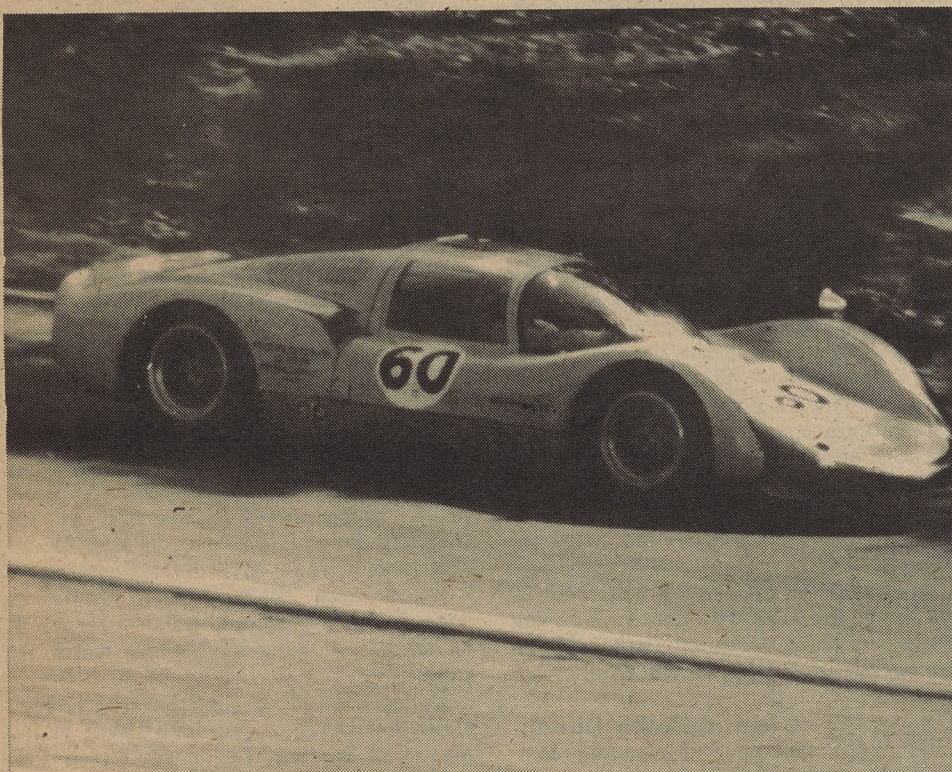

A member of the Porsche-sponsored team in the mid-'60s, he was co-driver when it won its class in the Sebring 24-hour run in 1963.

Wester retired from racing in 1968 when his mechanic partner died of cancer and Porsche withdrew from the big races in the U.S. because of restrictions put on the competitions it could enter.

Now, Young Life is an even greater challenge for Wester—one he finds more rewarding than racing. The organization was founded in 1941 and continues to offer high school and junior-high aged youths the message of Christ in an atmosphere of fun and friendship with adults.

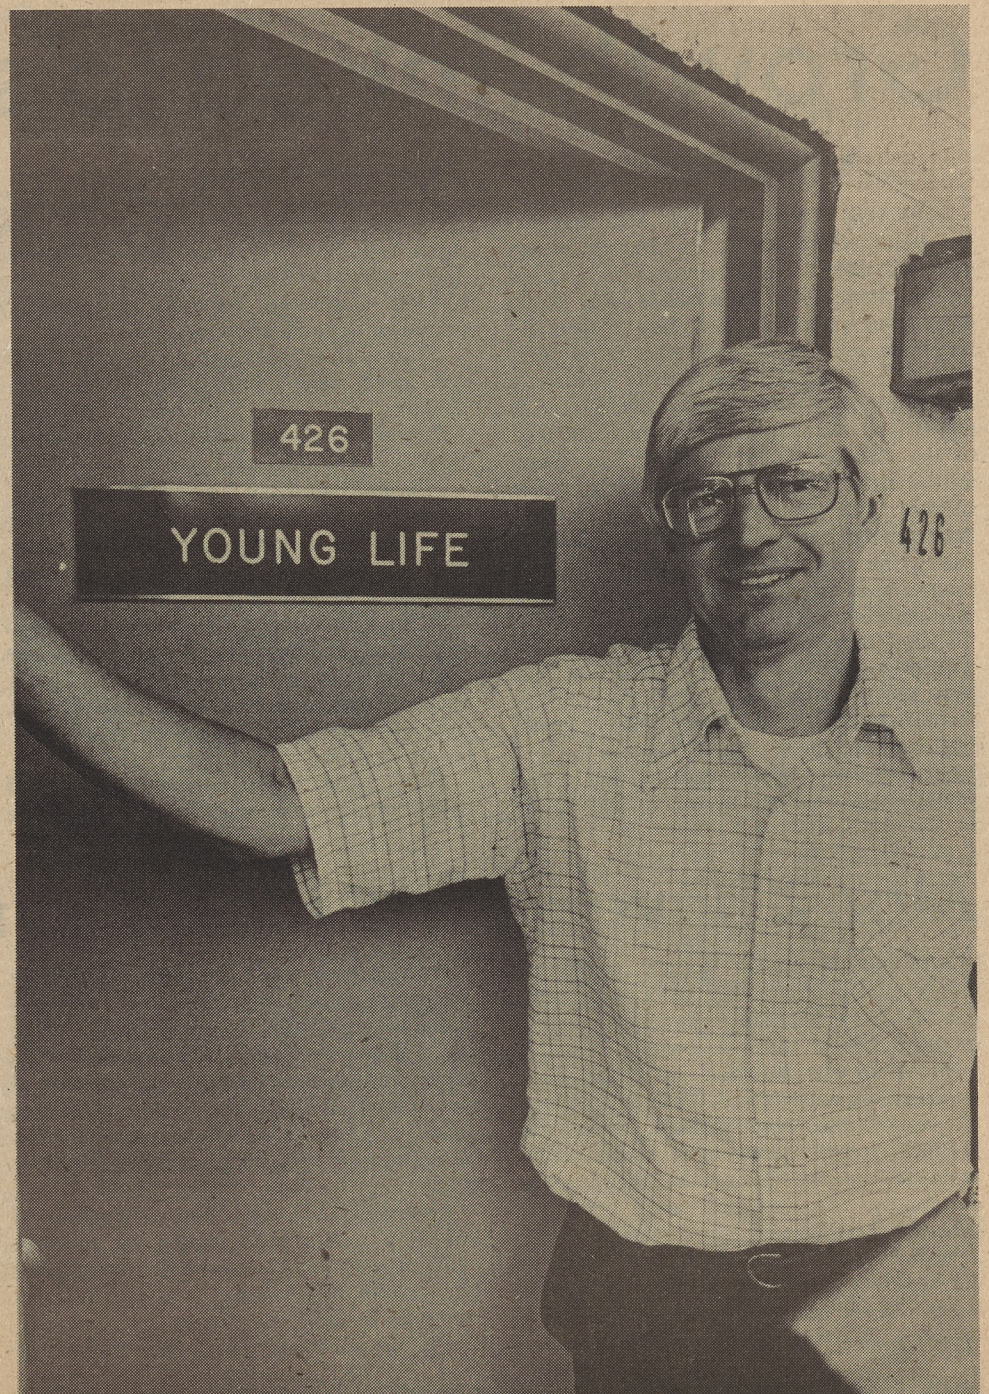

*He quit racing

died from cancer*

On the Monterey Peninsula, Young Life clubs are organized through the high schools with weekly meetings at the homes of students in the clubs. Activities are aimed at having a good time and building friendships, Wester said, with "a lot of fun. They let it all out, do skits, singing. The message is usually light, short."

BEFORE HE gave up racing in 1969, Don Wester drove 2-liter cars for the Porsche racing team in the U.S., taking a national title in this Carrera.

DON WESTER of Carmel Valley has shifted his attention from selling new cars and driving race cars to Young Life, a Christian youth organization with an office in Monterey. Wester credits a weekend seminar three years ago for helping him become a "born again" Christian and giving him a new outlook on life. He sold his share in the Wester auto dealership and now works free for Young Life. (Michael Stang photo)

Young Life also has nine summer camps in North America, playing host to about 20,000 youngsters each summer.

Wester came into contact with the organization through a chance meeting with area director Jim Green one day at Laguna Seca Raceway. This was after his "rebirth" as a Christian.

"He came in one day and said, 'It's quite an experience meeting Jesus Christ. Now what do you do with the rest of your life?'"

The two became good friends, Wester said, meeting often and praying together.

"I began to see there was someone in the world who cared about me as a person," he said.

GREEN ASKED WESTER to go to a Young Life camp in British Columbia. He did. From that point, his connection with the organization and Green grew until he finally reached the point last winter where he broke completely with the car dealership and went to work for Young Life full-time.

For a long time, "I didn't have the courage to leave," Wester said. "I was used to the money and also I wondered what would I do. But as I was moving to the point where I wanted to be less involved with the business, Jim wanted me to get more involved. But to stay just to make money is not a lifestyle for me. And I was holding Jim back. So the break was pretty easy when it came."

He now is living on half the income he used to have. He has changed to a more austere lifestyle, one less involved with material goods.

"People say to me, 'It's easy to give stuff up when you have a lot of money,'" Wester said.

"That used to bother me and I thought a lot about it. But that's their hangup. I would love to change my lifestyle, be able to cut back more and more, free more of my worldly possessions for Christ," said Wester.

He said that one of his "brothers in Christ" supports a family of five on $8,000 a year.

Wester has moved from being a Carmel area group leader for Young Life in 1975 to the regional office. Next, he believes, is a move to build a spiritual base in the business community. He expects to move in that direction with Green, whom he describes in reverent tones because of Green's ability to inspire others.

"Each of us has different gifts," Wester said. "Jim can see great visions. I'm an organizer. I can look and see all the little steps you have to go through to make the visions real."

Already, they are organizing a Mayors' Prayer Breakfast for the eight Peninsula-area mayors. Scheduled to start in the fall,

Today, selling cars is last thing on his mind

they hope to draw 1,600 persons to the convention center for the event.

WESTER REMAINS a Catholic. He was converted in 1964. Despite some "obscuring of the message of Christ" through the rituals of the church, Wester finds it worthwhile for him to attend Mass.

His wife Patsy is "a little behind me" in committing her life to Christ, he says, but that is the direction in which the couple is moving with their children Stacy, 11, Scott, 9, and Tory, 7.

"A new light has come into the home out of a personal relationship with Christ if you let him lead your life," Wester says.

He says he believes mankind may be moving toward its last days, that current history is the fulfillment of the prophecies of the Book of Revelations. His optimism about personal growth and development extends to a general optimism about the "renewal of spirit in the world."

These are values which mean something to Don Wester now. Selling cars is the last thing on his mind.

Growth linked to sewage capabilities

By KEN PETERSON

SEWAGE TREATMENT and disposal has emerged as one of the critical issues that will affect future growth in Carmel Valley. Policy decisions made now could determine whether the Valley retains its rural character or develops at a rapid pace.

That is the opinion shared by Peninsula and Monterey County health officials and is one of the conclusions that will be presented to the Carmel Valley Master Plan Committee next Thursday in a report on the subject. The committee was formed in December 1976 to review the Valley Master Plan for development and suggest revisions. It hopes to make a report within the next two months.

Chris Keehn, a Valley building contractor who prepared the wastewater study, has consulted with representatives of the County Health Department, the Carmel Sanitary District, the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments and anyone else who has looked at the Valley sewage disposal situation.

"They all agree it is at a critical point," Keehn said on Friday. "A decision has to be made and strictly enforced to keep Carmel Valley semi-rural or we will need a larger system—package (sewage treatment) plants or I don't know what."

"If growth is rapid and dense, the Valley will need more than septic tanks," he declared.

County Environmental Health Director Walter Wong agreed.

"Carmel Valley is at the crossroads now," he said in an interview last week. "There needs to be a policy decision right now, coupling development with a new sewage treatment facility."

"If they want to keep Carmel Valley rural and maintain septic tanks, there has to be some decision on spreading them farther apart. If there is high-density development, then there must be a decision on a public sewer system."

Wong said there already are 2,000 dwellings on septic tanks in the Valley. The county planning commission considered an ordinance Wednesday which would require a minimum one-acre lot for new homes with septic tanks. It has been commission policy for the last three years to require the one-acre minimum and this ordinance would put that policy into law.

But Wong pointed out that many of the Valley septic tanks were installed before Larger capacity, more growth?

1957. Until that year, the county had no rules at all governing septic tank construction or requiring a minimum lot size. Although later regulations were placed on septic tanks, much of the Valley has small lots with undersize septic tanks, he said.

WONG LOOKS askance on master septic tanks for high-density development, something proposed for a 220-unit condominium development at Vista Nadura, part of the 1,296-acre Anita Doud ranch adjacent to Carmel Valley Manor. Quail Lodge has a similar system, he said.

"A septic system is a rural system," he said. "All these fancy things don't make it an urban system."

In Wong's eyes, the best alternative would be for all of Carmel Valley to join the Carmel Sanitary District or to form its own sanitary district. The State Regional Water Quality Control Board in its March 1975 Basin Plan for the Central Coast urged that "the Carmel Sanitary District should manage the consolidated facilities and programs in Carmel Valley and Carmel Highlands."

The regional board said that septic systems could be used in lieu of sewage facilities "for areas which can demonstrate that such systems are workable."

Wong pointed out that under the sanitary district only "one body is responsible" for administering sewage treatment in the area. He said this could mean a separate treatment facility in the Mid-Valley region, but in any case would put all treatment systems under a central authority.

Keehn said his report assumes that "a portion of the Valley will most likely annex. All we say is those areas that could potentially hook up (to the district) should be reviewed on a case-by-case basis. For the rest of the Valley, we defer. We just don't have the technical expertise on the committee, or the time and money. The issue will need further study."

KEVIN WALSH, district engineer for the Carmel Sanitary District, agreed that planning and consistency are necessary to solve the sewage problem.

"I see us as a problem solver," he said Friday at the district treatment plant south of Carmel. If the district has information about where growth is coming and how much growth there will be, it can plan its facilities accordingly, Walsh indicated.

But the central issue is the need for a

Many have septic tanks, but don't know it

Although Monterey County health officials must issue a permit for a septic tank, once the tank is installed its maintenance is in the hands of the homeowner.

Septic tanks function in place of a municipal sewer system. The tank collects all wastewater from toilets, sinks and bathtubs in an underground holding tank. Bacteria break down the solids and eventually the sewage seeps into the ground through a rock-filled trench and into a leach field. Theoretically, all harmful substances are killed by bacteria or filtered out in the soil before the effluent gets back in the water table.

To help keep septic systems functioning properly, the county will provide homeowners with a free septic tank maintenance reminder card, which can be posted to keep them informed of the state of the system. If the home is sold, it serves notice on the buyer that the house has a tank and tells what is needed to keep it in shape.

According to the health department notice, a septic tank should be pumped every three years to remove solid materials that cannot be broken down into fluid by bacterial action.

Yet, according to Kevin Walsh, district engineer for the Carmel Sanitary District, "A lot of people on septic tanks don't know that they have them. And if they do, they don't take care of them."

Walter Wong, environmental health director for Monterey County, said easy ways to tell if a septic system is failing are slow drainage from plumbing fixtures or if sewage backs up into the home or surfaces above ground. He cautioned that surface sewage overflow is illegal, a misdemeanor punishable by a fine, imprisonment or both.

The county recommends that homeowners call a licensed septic tank cleaning company or installer when problems develop.

The health department has available oversize cards with hints about septic tank maintenance and a chart to show when tanks have been pumped or repair work done. Anyone interested in getting a card for their home can call the department at 373-0111 or come by the office at 1200 Aguajito Rd., Monterey.

BECAUSE IT operates the only sewage treatment plant in the area, the Carmel Sanitary District has been pulled into the larger debate about how much growth should be allowed in Carmel Valley. The facilities to which this road leads can treat no more than 2.4 million gallons of effluent per day. Leaders of the district would like to know how county planners intend to handle the local push for development so they can prepare their own plan for the future.

Marriott wants to join Carmel Sanitary District

Developers of the proposed Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge in Carmel Valley will ask to annex to the Carmel Sanitary District when the district directors meet May 9.

Dan Hinrichs of Culp Western Colt in El Dorado Hills, the clean water consultant for the proposed 376-room hotel, has written to the district asking for time to appear before the board at the meeting.

Gerald Dalton, the attorney who represents developer Winthrop Carmel Inc., confirmed Monday that the company will ask to annex its property into the sanitary district.

The district has a ban on new annexations and on new sewage hook-ups for property already within the district. The ban was enacted by district directors in August 1976 when treatment facilities neared their rated capacity of 2.4 million gallons per day (mgd) of dry weather flow.

Although the district is completing construction of a new anaerobic digester for treating sewage, District Engineer Kevin Walsh reiterated, in an interview Friday, that the digester will not increase treatment capacity above the 2.4 mgd figure.

The Marriott Lodge envisions a daily wastewater output of 60,000 gallons. The Rancho Canada Golf Course clubhouse, situated on the lodge site, already is in the district and a sewer main runs through the property, near the site of the proposed hotel.

The annexation application will come 22 days before the Monterey County Planning Commission plans to resume its hearing on a use permit application for the hotel-resort complex.

County Environmental Health Director Walter Wong and several planning commissioners urged the developers, at the first hearing on March 29, to apply for annexation to the district and get a definite yes-or-no answer before coming back for further hearings.

Dalton said the application will offer several alternatives to the district directors. The one that would be "most satisfying to us from a monetary and practical point of view" would be straight annexation into the district system, he said.

The Marriott developers will offer alternatives of holding their sewage for pumping into the district plant during off-peak hours, to minimize the strain on a system when it nears capacity, and of constructing their own package treatment plant at the golf course site. Approval for the on-site plant and an irrigation plan for watering the course with treated effluent would first have to come from the State Department of Health, the Regional Water Quality Control Board and the county Environmental Health Department.

During the environmental review process, Walsh wrote a letter to Hinrichs, expressing reservations about the pretreatment of sewage and release to the treatment plant at off-peak hours. He wrote that while technical problems "could be adequately resolved," the district staff "feel that it is unwise to allow on-site pretreatment facilities as proposed."

Dalton said the developers are drawing up specific plans for the full-scale treatment plant, which will be presented at the Planning Commission hearing May 31. He said they already have determined that a two-acre lake 10 feet deep would be adequate to hold treated wastewater for 90 days without using any of the water for irrigation.

Dalton pointed out that this contradicted statements by geologist John Logan at the March 29 hearing. Logan contended that they would "half the golf course" to construct a lake big enough to hold the treated effluent during the rainy season.

decision on what the growth pattern will be. Walsh said the sanitary district should not be forced to make that decision.

He pointed to the Marriott Lodge proposal. "Sewage is not a problem with Marriott unless you choose to make it a problem," said Walsh.

The real issue, he said, is whether the hotel should be built at all, and that is something for the public to decide. Once the decision is made—either way—the district can act and deal with the resulting sewage treatment situation.

The district is preparing an Areawide Facilities Plan, trying to anticipate growth and determine what type of sewage facilities will be needed to accommodate it. Walsh said the district is coordinating its plan with the efforts of the Carmel Valley Master Plan Committee so the two are consistent. A draft of the district plan is expected by late summer, he said.

Already, Walsh said, groups and individuals in some areas of the Valley and in the Carmel Highlands have asked not to be included in any district expansion plans because they don't want sewers.

"People associate sewers with growth," he said.

Because of the scope of the sewage problem, Keehn said he will recommend to the Master Plan committee that the board of supervisors and the public health department study the problem further. He called the task "a gigantic undertaking."

Wong is taking steps to deal with the situation on an interim basis. On proposals now pending, such as the package sewage treatment plants planned by Carmel Valley Ranch and the Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge developers, he is "going beyond state law" in requiring stringent specifications and detailed advance plans.

"There is a direct watershed beneath the entire area," he said. Wong said caution is needed to guard against contaminating the water table. Thus, any storage ponds for treated sewage at the two developments would have to be completely lined to keep wastewater from seeping into the ground. And, because the developers want to use the treated water for golf-course irrigation, special sensors would have to be put underground to keep the water from penetrating below the root level of plants.

WONG SAID he believes a 60-day storing capacity for wastewater may be inadequate. Marriott has proposed that capacity. Wong suggested a four- to five-month capacity would be needed. He said this is based on the worst rainy season in a 50-year period—1968—when at one point it rained for 28 out of 30 days.

Both Marriott and the Carmel Valley Ranch envision storing large quantities of treated wastewater in lakes or tanks and mixing it with well water to irrigate golf courses. The proposed Carmel Valley Ranch development would have a 50,000-gallon per day capacity for the first phase of its treatment plant. Marriott Lodge envisions treating nearly 60,000 gallons per day in its own plant if it cannot join the Carmel Sanitary District.

Kaye Chandler, project coordinator for Carmel Valley Ranch, said specifics are now being drawn up for treatment facilities there. Gerald Dalton, attorney for Winthrop Carmel Inc., developer of the Marriott Lodge, said the firm will present detailed treatment plans at a May 31 planning commission hearing.

As troublesome as large developments are, Wong said the single-home septic tank situation is "getting to the point where it is critical."

"How far can you go before the soil can no longer filter and treat (sewage)?" he asked.

Groundwater in the Carmel Valley has not yet been affected, he said, although permits for some septic tanks have been denied in the Valley and Carmel Highlands because of unfavorable soil conditions.

"If a home is built on shale soil, a septic tank will not filter the sewage and it will eventually get into the groundwater," Wong said.

Then, too, if a septic tank is not maintained properly—and the county recommends having it pumped every three years — "you get sewage running down the streets in a wet year," Wong said. "People in general don't want sewers, though, because sewers mean growth."

Wong, a third generation native of Monterey County, has spent 23 years with the health department. He has toured the nation looking at water treatment and reclamation systems, and earned a master's degree in public health while working for the county. Ultimately, he said, he doesn't care whether Carmel Valley opts for septic tanks and restricted growth or a public sewer system and higher density.

"I've got to protect the public," he said.

Stress conference in Monterey

Researchers who have revolutionized long-accepted ideas about the nature of stress will share their findings at an April 15-16 conference at the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey.

The conference is sponsored by University of California Extension, Los Angeles and Santa Cruz.

Speakers who will discuss the positive and negative aspects of stress include Hans Selye, Barbara Brown,

Obituaries

Edna Mc Kinnon dead at 84

Funeral services were conducted Saturday for Edna Rankin McKinnon, 84, a Carmel Valley resident who was a pioneer advocate of birth control and family planning.

Mrs. McKinnon died April 5 at Children's Hospital in San Francisco. A native of Missoula, Mont., she had lived at Hacienda Carmel since her retirement in 1967, but remained active in Common Cause, UNICEF and Planned Parenthood of Monterey County.

She attended Wellesley College and the University of Wisconsin, receiving a law degree from the University of Montana. She was the first native-born Montana woman admitted to the bar association in that state.

Her brother, Wellington Rankin, became a Montana legend as a multimillionaire rancher and lawyer, and her sister was the late Jeanette Rankin, also of Carmel Valley, the first woman elected to the U.S. House of Representatives.

Mrs. McKinnon campaigned throughout Montana for her sister in her victorious 1916 congressional campaign. She backed legislation by the congresswoman to grant women citizenship independent of their husbands, and a bill which subsidized health care and the teaching of hygiene during pregnancy and early maternity.

Later, she worked against an 1873 law banning the distribution of information on population control. When the law was reinterpreted, she helped set up population control clinics in 32 states. She also became part of the Pathfinder Fund, financed by soap millionaire Clarence Gamble, promoting family planning.

She worked closely with Margaret Sanger and traveled extensively throughout the U.S., Asia, Africa and the Middle East for the cause of birth control.

Her life's work is detailed in a 1974 biography Too Many People, Too Little Love by Wilma Dykeman.

Survivors include her daughter, Dorothy Mackie Brown of La Jolla, and two grandsons.

Mrs. Thomsen dies at home

Helen Louise Thomsen, 64, of Carmel Valley, was found dead at her home Friday. Her death was attributed to natural causes and it probably occurred that Monday, according to the Monterey County coroner's office.

Mrs. Thomsen, of 137 Calle de los Agrinensors, was a 35-year resident of the Valley. She was a native of Flushing, N.Y.

Survivors include her son, Peter Thomsen of Gilroy; stepmother Kathleen O'Conner of New York; and one grandchild.

Private cremation at the Little Chapel-by-the-Sea was arranged by Paul Mortuary.

Bike ride scheduled Saturday

A leisurely bike ride, two hikes and a potluck dinner are on the outing calendar of the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club this weekend. All interested persons are welcome to join.

An easy five-mile hike up and down Jacks Peak will be followed by a potluck dinner at the home of Lowel and Janie Figen, 1443 Deer Flat Rd., Monterey, at 1:30 Saturday. They ask that you bring a main dish, salad or dessert to serve six or more and your own recyclable utensils. For more information, phone 375-9667.

Another, more difficult hike, is also scheduled Saturday. This will be an eight-mile round-trip loop hike ascending 2,000 feet up Partington Canyon and returning by jeep road.

Hikers will meet behind Brinton's at the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Rd., Carmel, at 8 a.m. for a 37-mile drive to the trail head. Bring lunch, water and a suggested carpool passenger fee of $2. For more information, phone Bill Bleick, 372-6738.

A 22-mile bike ride through a beautiful orchard and redwood canyon in the Corralitos area north of Watsonville is scheduled Sunday, April 16. Riders are to meet at Cinema 70 parking lot at 8:45 a.m. or at Pinto Lake Park at 9:45 a.m. with lunch and water. You are requested to check your bike's mechanical condition since there will be no sag wagon.

For more information, call leaders Chet and Bev Gadaire, 375-8995.

Big cat show

Cat fanciers treat at Fairgrounds

Cats without tails, cats that look like they've had permanent waves, cats that bear a striking resemblance to raccoons—fluffy cats and sleek cats, striped cats and solid cats—and many cats that look just like those at home will be entered in the Fifth Annual East of Eden Cat Fanciers Cat Show Saturday and Sunday, April 15-16, at the Monterey County Fairgrounds Exhibition Hall, Fairgrounds and Garden Rds., Monterey. Judging begins at 10 a.m. both days.

Cat shows traditionally have themes, and the East of Eden Cat Fanciers have chosen the Fifth Running of the Monterey 200 as this year's theme. Exhibitors decorate the cages in which the cats are displayed. Special prizes will be awarded for the best decorated cage.

Purebred cats will be judged in several categories for each breed. Among the breeds entered in this year's show are American Shorthair, Maine Coon, Korat, Siamese, Rex, Burmese, Persian, Balinese and Abyssinian.

Household pet classes have become extremely popular at cat shows. To be eligible to compete, a female over eight months of age and a male over one year old must be neutered.

Classes for household pets are divided into long and shorthair divisions and solid color, bicolor, multicolor, tabby with or without white, purebred type (cats that are or resemble purebreds but are not registered, as in some Siamese) or any other color (Siamese with white, for example). Household pet classes account for almost half the total entry.

Household pets are judged on condition, appearance and personality. Trophies and other awards will be made to top cats in each of four rings.

Admission is $1.50 for adults and 50 cents for children.

For more information, phone 372-5994.

'Peter Pan' takes stage at Hartnell College

Peter Pan, Sir James Barrie's classic story of "the boy who would not grow up," will be presented by the Hartnell College Theater Department Thursday-Sunday, April 13-16, and Friday-Sunday, April 21-23.

The play will be presented in the Performing Arts Theatre, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas, at 8 p.m. for evening performances (everyday except Sunday, April 16) and at 2 p.m. for Sunday matinees.

According to director Michael Griggs, the Hartnell production may offer some surprises.

"We're working on an exciting concept of the play," he said, "and of course we have some special effects up our sleeves—and not necessarily the traditional ones. With the script, however, we've gone back to the original sources—Barrie's original scripts and two books he wrote about Peter. People who only know the musical or Disney versions will have an extra surprise, and a pleasant one I hope. Peter Pan is a moving, sensitive story about what it means to grow up and some of the joys, fears and pain of childhood."

Cast members will include Cecilia Mena as Peter, Christy Turano as Wendy, Larry Potts as John, Brent Hoelt as Michael, Taft Miller as Mr. Darling, Cathy Marcroft as Mrs. Darling and Barry Reveis as Captain Hook.

Peter Pan has delighted audiences since it first appeared on the London stage in 1904. The play is best known to Americans through the Broadway musical comedy version, which starred Mary Martin as Peter and Cyril Ritchard as Captain Hook, and the Walt Disney animated version.

Tickets, at $2.50 general admission and $1.50 for students, children and Gold Card holders, are available at the Hartnell Box Office and Abinante Music, 425 Alvarado St., Monterey.

For more information, phone 1-758-1221.

Jazz quartet concerts Sunday at Barnyard

Zytron, the jazz quartet that one reviewer said "reaffirms the uncompromising wildness and ferocious beauty of John Coltrane," will present two shows Sunday, April 16, at the Carmel Barnyard Theatre, Highway 1 and Rio Rd., Carmel. Shows begin at 7 and 9:30 p.m.

The quartet is led by Zitro, on drums, who is artist-in-residence at the Kuumbwa Jazz Society in Santa Cruz and has played with such jazz greats as John Coltrane, Charles Lloyd, Zoot Simms, Sonny Simmons, Joachim Khun and Jim Pepper. Other members are Paul Contos on reeds, Paul Nagel on piano and Stan Paplin on bass.

Advance tickets, at $4, may be reserved at the Barnyard Theatre, 625-1228. Tickets will be $4.50 at the door. Beer, wine and food are served at the theatre.

Mime show at MPC

Mime Yass Hakoshima will perform Friday, April 14, at the Monterey Peninsula College Theater, 980 Fremont St., Monterey. The program begins at 8 p.m.

Born in Osaka, Japan, Hakoshima has studied Japanese literature, classic dance, Noh movement and mime. He has been a guest artist with many European and Western groups and has made several world tours. Admission is $2.50.

Wildflower show in Pacific Grove museum

More than 500 species of wildflowers native to Monterey County will be on view at the 17th annual Wildflower Show of the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History Friday-Sunday, April 14-16. Admission is free.

Museum director Vern Yadon said 1978 will be a good year for the more than 1,750 species of wildflowers that grow in Monterey County, although they will be more difficult to find than they were during drought years. Many seldom-seen flowers will bloom profusely this year in the areas burned in last year's Marble Cone fire.

Yadon added that the annual crop of wildflowers cannot be assessed from the window of a car driving by at 55 miles an hour. Hikes in the state and county parks are suggested for a thorough look at the spring flowers.

The wildflowers were collected on a 12-mile hike up Villa Creek and down Salmon Creek last weekend. The flowers are kept fresh in newspapers set in water.

Although the wildflowers last throughout the three-day show, opening day presents the blooms at their freshest and best.

Hidden Valley group presents free concert

The Hidden Valley Instrumental Ensemble will present a free concert of chamber music Sunday, April 16, at All Saints' Episcopal Church, Dolores and Ninth, Carmel. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

The program will include String Trio for Violin, Viola and Cello by Ernest Dohnanyi; Trio for Violin, Horn and Piano by Brahms; Quartet for Violin, Cello, Clarinet and Piano by Paul Hindemith; and Concertino for Piano, Horn, Clarinet, Bassoon, Two Violins and Viola by Leos Janacek.

For more information, phone 659-3115.

Barnyard tryouts Friday, Saturday

Auditions for the Carmel Barnyard Theatre production of The Roar of the Greasepaint, the Smell of the Crowd have been scheduled Friday and Saturday, April 14-15. Hours are 4-7 p.m. Friday and 1-4 p.m. Saturday at the theatre.

The museum is at 165 Forest Ave., Pacific Grove. Hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. For more information, phone 372-4212.

Susan who? She wants Jerry's job

GOVERNOR Edmund G. Brown Jr. may not know it yet, but he has a challenger lurking amid the pine trees of Carmel. Her name is Susan George and although her name won't be on the ballot, she is an official write-in candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the June 6 primary.

Mrs. George recently moved to Carmel with her husband Malcomb from Fresno, where she had spent most of her life. She also lived in the Bay Area, attending San Mateo Community College and receiving her bachelor's degree in art and psychology from San Francisco State University.

A newcomer to politics, she decided to challenge Brown because "the ideas of government are right but it's not being run well."

Besides, she said, being governor is "a good job. It's not too bad." And, she adds, "I have some ideas I'd like to take care of."

Although she said it is still early in the campaign to be getting too specific, she did give a strong endorsement of Proposition 13, the Jarvis-Gann property tax limit initiative, and criticized Proposition 8, the legislature's property tax cut measure.

"It doesn't have the property tax controls on it that 13 does," Mrs. George said. "It has no control over the assessor."

And, she added, "I don't think houses should be taken away from a lot of older people. Shelter is a necessity."

ON OTHER issues, she wants a tougher stand against crime, stricter standards for welfare recipients and selective wage increases, rather than across-the-board pay hikes.

According to her husband, a parapsychologist who also acts as her political advisor, she wants "freedom of the press as far as political and other such matters, so as the American people know what's going on."

Mrs. George said she plans to campaign primarily in the urban areas of the state — Los Angeles and San Francisco, relying on person-to-person contacts.

She will not go door-to-door, however.

"I want to pick the people I'll talk to," she said. "If they look intelligent and interesting, I'll talk to them. If you pick good people, they'll tell other people. I can't talk to everyone."

Is she a serious candidate for governor?

"I expect to get a lot of questions like that," she said. "I guess if I was 50 or 60 with gray hair or was a different type they might take me more seriously. It makes a big difference."

She is, instead, 28 with blonde hair and blue eyes. And she wants to be taken seriously.

"I always want to think positive. I want to win, even though that does sound a bit unrealistic." But, she added, "He is not that aware I'm running against him."

"I'm not that bad of a candidate," Mrs. George said in a matter-of-fact manner. "After people get to hear Jerry Brown, it would really encourage them to vote for me."

Information about the campaign is available by writing 3850 Rio Rd., No. 69, Carmel, Calif. 93921.

And watch out, Jerry Brown.

Lodge plan advances

there would be problems with sewage disposal and increased traffic in the area.

The original Peter Pan Lodge at the site, on Peter Pan and Upper Walden Roads in Wildcat Canyon, burned down in a 264-acre fire on Nov. 20, 1959.

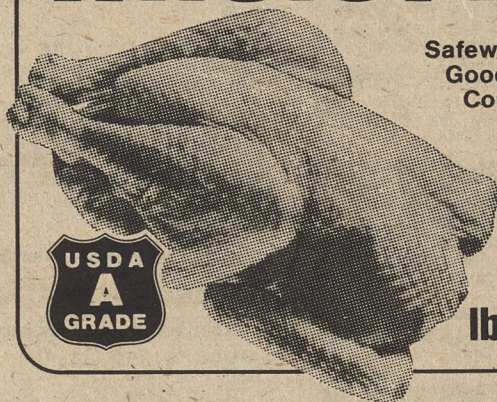

The developer is Gurries Management Co. in Gilroy.

Plans for the motel call for 18 rooms, two tennis courts and a swimming pool.

The project would be built on a 3.3-acre site and would be only the second motel in the Highlands besides the Highlands Inn.

The property is zoned for multiple dwelling use, however, it is the only parcel in the area so zoned.
